

Strength in Numbers

EVMS welcomes the most diverse class in its history

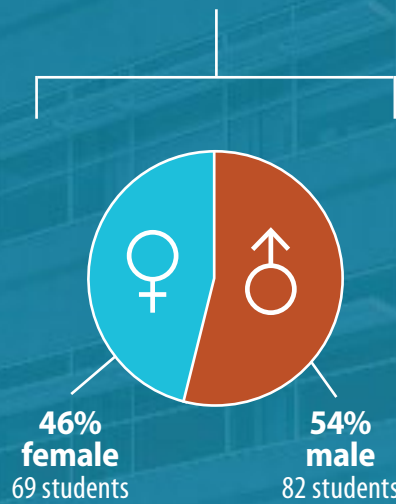

Thomas Kimble, MD, Associate Dean of Admissions and Enrollment, leads

EVMS' holistic review process for admissions. Implemented in 2015, the process enables the admissions committee to identify students who not only have the ability to succeed, but who possess qualities important to the practice of medicine and healthcare. Those might include overcoming significant obstacles in life, being first-generation college students, volunteering in their communities, serving in leadership roles as undergraduates and taking the initiative to shadow physicians and other healthcare providers. Often, after a school implements a holistic review process, the Medical College Admission Test scores and GPA scores of entering classes go down. "But our MCAT scores have steadily increased over the past five years," Dr. Kimble says, "and our GPA scores remain stable."

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

151

2019 incoming students

SCHOOL OF HEALTH PROFESSIONS

405*

2019 incoming students

Underrepresented Minorities

of the underrepresented minorities are black men, a demographic that has been severely lacking in medical schools nationwide for 35 years.

Underrepresented Minorities

*This data is as of Aug. 21. Several programs continued enrolling students through September, and the incoming Physician Assistant class starts in January.